Export Grants: How to get the Government to Finance your Marketing Costs

Peter Campbell
Waterfront 1
Audience: Australian Providers

Session description

The Export Market Development Grants (EMDG) program is the Federal Government's main source of financial assistance for exporters including Australian education providers, with more than $130 million paid annually as a partial reimbursement of export marketing expenses. This presentation will explain why you should be claiming EMDG and how it can help you expedite your international student recruitment objectives and grow your student numbers. Various types of export marketing expenditure will be discussed, focusing on expenses commonly incurred in the international education industry. EMDG is not money for nothing, and a rigorous audit program is applied to claims so we will cover practical advice on the requirements for a successful EMDG application.

Speaker

Peter Campbell
Principal,
Export Vision
Australia

Peter Campbell, the Principal of Export Vision, has been assisting exporters to achieve their goals for 40 years, including 9 years with Austrade providing export market advice and information, and investigating Export Market Development Grants (EMDG) claims. Since then, he has specialised in helping companies to maximise the funding benefits available from EMDG and other Government programs, and in making representations to Government.

Peter provides consulting, lobbying and strategic services to several major industry associations. Peter is currently Director of the Export Consultants Association Inc (ECAI) and represents EMDG consultants and the exporting community as a member of key committees with Austrade.

With clients in a diverse range of industries, Peter has specialised in the education sector, helping many schools, private education providers, universities and education industry bodies to achieve substantial export grants to support their international marketing. Peter’s knowledge of their promotional activities and expenses enables education providers to effectively utilise EMDG to help realise their international objectives.

Peter is a CPA, has an MBA from the University of Sydney and is completing post-graduate studies in archaeology.

Education Agents - the Voice to Government and Industry

Robert Parsonson
Waterfront 1
Audience: All

► Session description

The education agent industry has been slow to bring a united voice on issues affecting their businesses. Education agents are the frontline in recruiting international students for Australian education providers, supplying over 70% of the numbers. The time has come for education agents to make a contribution to policy debates, assist in raising the quality of agent advice, and the protection of international student consumer rights.

The International Student Education Agents Association (ISEAA) was started to provide a peak body for education agents to advocate to government, peak bodies, providers and change some of the perceptions around the role education agents. Since the formation of ISEAA, education agents have given evidence to the Migration Committee in Canberra, and are actively engaging with DET, DHA, Austrade, the office of the Overseas Students Ombudsman, plus various other international education peak bodies.

In 2019 the Australian government plans to publish education agent performance data and has released the REPORT OF THE INQUIRY INTO EFFICACY OF CURRENT REGULATION OF AUSTRALIAN MIGRATION AND EDUCATION AGENTS. This is a critical time to be heard. Learn about ISEAA's plans and give your feedback on what is needed for a sustainable international education industry in the future.

► Speaker

Robert Parsonson,
Executive Officer,
ISEAA,
Australia

Robert Parsonson has 28 years in education and education export services, working within Australia and internationally. He is an expert on the development and execution of international student marketing strategies and offshore market entry. With experience in ELICOS, VET and higher education institutions, Rob's ability to take novice businesses on their first foray into international markets and guide their journey to build sustainable long-term international student businesses is widely recognised.

Rob's previous clients include StudyNSW, helping develop the IET Strategy for StudyNT, an education agency strategy for Study Queensland, and a VET study with education agents for the IEO of the SA Government.

In 2017 (in Melbourne) Rob facilitated the first education agent symposium in Australia – The Symposium on Leading Education Recruitment (sympled.com.au) - that was repeated in Brisbane in 2018. The symposium encouraged the formation of the International Student Education Agents Association (ISEAA) in 2018.
Activating your Global Alumni Network

Gretchen Dobson

The Importance of Social Responsibility in International Education

Chris Evason

Waterfront 1

Audience: All

► Session description

International Education is Australia’s largest service export, worth more than $30 million to the Australian economy. With a larger per capita intake of international students (500,000+) compared with any other destination country, it is the clear leader in respect of considering international education through a business framework.

Yet, it often struggles to frame a positive narrative in the media and the wider community. With the forces of xenophobic populism at large across the world, it is more important than ever to demonstrate with actions not just words, how international education can be a force for good in the world (beyond any good achieved for individuals gaining a quality education). This session will explore some models for a socially responsible international education organisation, whether an institution, agent or service provider.

► Speaker

Chris Evason

Managing Director, International Education Services, IES, Australia

Chris Evason founded the not-for-profit, International Education Services (IES) in 1997. In partnership with the University of Queensland, IES has become one of the premier pathway institutions in Australia with over 1100 international students enrolled annually. Chris established PIER in 2005, as a vehicle to provide online education agent training. Since that time PIER has trained and continues to support a network of more than 40,000 education agent counsellors, of which 6,000 have accredited as Qualified Education Agent Counsellors (QEAC. IES have partnered with SBS to provide inclusion training (discrimination, bias, culture, indigenous, LGBTQ+, age, disability and gender) to the Australian workforce through online training programs. This training aims to improve social cohesion within the Australian multicultural population with more than 200,000 individuals participating.
Go Beyond Sydney, Melbourne, Brisbane: Choosing an Australian Study Location

Rebecca Hall, Rachael Shanahan

Waterfront 2
Audience: All

Session description
Conversions into less well known destinations can take longer and be harder to achieve. But every student has different needs and every Australian city and town has something different to offer. Go beyond the major, internationally well-known destinations and discover Austrade’s destination marketing plans for study locations across the country. Hear case studies from Australia’s north and south, the Northern Territory and Tasmania, on why these study destinations work for students.

Session description

Micro-credentials are mini-qualifications that demonstrate skills, knowledge, and/or experience in a given subject area or capability.

Now more than ever, the job market has an urgency for micro credentials. These mini qualifications are becoming the forefront of professional skillsets, with 95% of human resource managers actively seeking micro-credentials from candidates.

Today’s employers need to ensure that their teams are equipped with a blend of hard and soft skills, and micro credentialing solidifies this need.

This session will explore how Laureate Australia & New Zealand is leveraging this great business opportunity with ‘micro modules’ and how these will provide students with pathways they can follow to achieve their ultimate goals.

Speaker

Hannah Payne,
Head of International Communications & Agent Engagement
Laureate International Universities, Australia

Hannah Payne is a communications specialist with over ten years of internal and external communications experience both in Australia and the UK, specifically working across the travel, tourism, consumer, education, property, government and NFP sectors. Her areas of expertise include media relations, writing, issues management, strategy development and implementation, event coordination and management, community engagement, social media campaign conception and management, plus planning and evaluation.
When Things Go Wrong - What We Can Learn from Current Issues in Student Complaints about Education Agents and Providers

Alex Smith
Waterfront 2
Audience: All

►Session description

Students who have problems with their education providers often contact their education agents to find solutions. How can agents help these students? What sorts of protections do the students have? Alex Smith from the Commonwealth Ombudsman will answer these questions and more.

►Speaker

Alex Smith,

Education Agents Performance and Transparency

Brett Galt - Smith, Warwick Miles

Waterfront 3
Audience: All

Session description

Education agents are an integral part of Australia’s international education system. They represent education providers to students and advise prospective students on courses of study available to them in all education sectors. The vast majority of agents achieve good outcomes by recruiting high-quality, genuine students who complete their courses and abide by their visa conditions. In this session, we will look at Australia’s current regulatory frameworks and how transparency of enrolment and visa outcomes can be used to change behaviour.

Speakers

Session description

From primary schools to PhDs, more and more international students are choosing Australia to pursue their dreams of a world-class education. Regardless of what has captured a student’s interest, Australia has courses across all sectors that can help students realise their future. Exploring one of these sectors, English Australia will showcase just how well the international education sector is performing and note some of its challenges. A key challenge is often the regulatory environment, so we will look at what the Australian government is doing to help you navigate your students’ visa requirements. These requirements are just one step of the process, so we will also discuss how the government can help you better manage your involvement in international student markets. This will help us all work towards unlocking our students’ ‘future unlimited’ in Australia.
